WHAT WE ARE TESTING

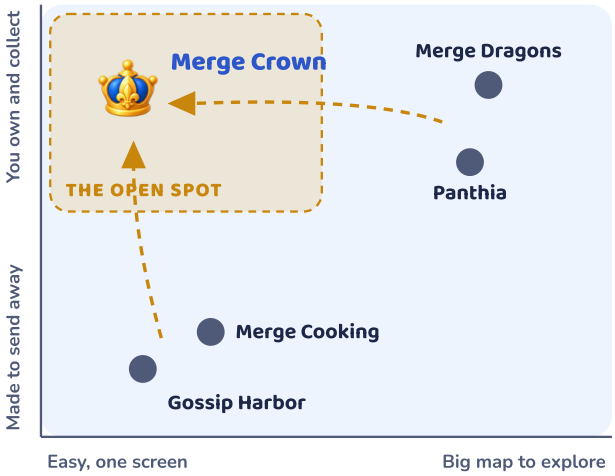

The bet behind Merge Crown

HYPOTHESIS

> Players stay longer and spend more when they own and collect what they make.

1. Keep merge easy. One board on one screen, with no big map to pan around.
2. What you build stays. Orders pay for a town that keeps growing.
3. Collect what you hatch. Creatures move into your town and fill the Breed Book.

It works if players keep coming back for longer than in today's one-screen merge games.

OUR BET

Merge Crown

Easy one-screen merge where your kingdom and creatures stay and grow.

The core loop

1. Merge
   Match two of the same item to make a better one.
2. Make goods
   Fruit becomes juice, roasts and more. Goods go to the Barn.
3. Deliver
   Royal Orders ask for goods and pay coins and XP.
4. Build
   Coins build homes, shops and workshops in the town.
5. Level up
   New boards, islands and dragons unlock.

↻ A bigger kingdom means more to merge, so the loop starts again.

The five steps in more detail

1. Merge

Each board is a grid of items. Tap a producer to make new items, then drag two matching items together to create the next item in the chain.

- Every board makes its own kind of goods, like fruit on the Orchard.
- Merging uses energy, which refills over time.
- New boards open as the town builds workshops.

2. Make goods

The top of a chain, or a workshop recipe, gives a finished good such as a juice. Players double-tap it, or drag it onto the Barn button, to store it.

- The Barn holds a set number of goods.
- Upgrading the Barn takes tools that orders and level-ups give.
- Only finished goods go to the Barn, so the board stays tidy.

3. Deliver

Characters around the kingdom send Royal Orders. Each one asks for a few finished goods from the Barn.

- Sending an order pays coins and XP, and sometimes building tools.
- An order players don't want can be skipped; a new one arrives after a short wait.
- One order board serves every board in the game.

4. Build

Coins build the town. Every building has a job, and the build menu shows it on each card.

- Homes add residents.
- Community buildings raise how many residents the town can hold.
- Workshops open new merge boards. Some buildings need a town level or enough residents.

5. Level up

XP raises the town level. Each level brings new buildings, and over time new boards and islands to explore.

- Settings shows what the next level brings.
- Islands are their own adventures, with creatures to hatch and bring home.
- A bigger town gives more to make, so the loop keeps growing.

Why players come back

Energy refills

Merging uses energy. It refills over time, so players return when it is full.

Gems skip the wait

Gems buy energy and speed things up. This is where players spend money.

Always something cooking

Buildings and workshops keep working while players are away.
